FRESH GROUND FLOUR -VS- BREAD MADE WITH OVEN BAKED FLOUR

FRESH GROUND FLOUR -VS- OVEN BAKED FLOUR

Can you imagine baking your flour before making it into bread? Well, that is exactly what you are buying from the grocery store. Whole Wheat bread made with flour which has been pre-baked and left to sit for weeks or even months before it is used. They do this to make the flour "shelf stable."

At Great Harvest we grind our own whole wheat flour and bake it into bread within 48 hours! We see no reason to pre-bake our flour and lose the amazing flavor and nutrition from the fresh ground flour.

Superior flavor! Superior nutrition! You can really taste the difference fresh ground flour makes.

JEWISH RYE

JEWISH RYE BREAD

It seems there is a great story behind every loaf we make. For Jewish Rye it's a pretty simple one.

Whenever my family is on the road and need a lunch or dinner we often find ourselves in a Deli. One of us always orders a Ruben sandwich and we judge the Deli based on how good the Ruben is. Well after eating countless Ruben sandwiches from Delis all over I decided I'd make a loaf of Jewish Rye so I could make the best Ruben right at home. I studied many recipes and came up with one full of flavor. I use two different rye flours and a very nice olive oil.

So now you can make the best Ruben right at home. Just pile on the corn-beef, sauerkraut, Swiss cheese and your choice of Thousand Island or Russian dressing.

After tasting a Ruben on my Great Harvest Jewish Rye you may never be able to order one from the Deli again! It's that good!!!

Cheers, Dan
